Fig 6-2: Lesion at left big toe (top view)

A 55-year-old man presents with a lesion at his big toenail for nine months. He receives oral antifungal treatment from his family doctor with no improvement. Except mild discomfort over his toenail, he is quite asymptomatic for his condition.

Question:

1. What is your diagnosis?
2. What physical examinations or relevant investigations should you perform?
3. How will you manage this patient?
